of Chiddingstone, being a part of the manor of the late Chancellor Robert R. Livingston. It is situated directly opposite the Catskill Mountains, so well described by Washington Irving in his legend of Rip Van Wirkle, and the view from the plazza at Chiddingstone has also been graphically delineated by Barry Gray in a recent number of the Home Journal, after a visit past there. It is upon the bank of the river, opposite Bristol, and the mountain and river views are unequalised, and so pronounced to be by all who have visited the place. The property consists of 80 acres of improved land, in a high state of cultivation, well underdrained and watered, with belts of native woods of every variety of forest trees, and the whole in perfect order. And there has been laid out upon the property within the past ten years in improvements about 80,000, as stated below; all new and in perfect order to-day. A part of the improvements are as follows:—

A Mansion of faced brick and brown stone, 52x50 feet basement, with French roof, long piazzas, is rooms, walmut and oak hall, bathroom, water tank, &c.; house been twice painted and first floor rescoed.
